

“What’s New in the Fall of the Roman Empire?”

A Lecture Series Sponsored by the Initiative for the Science of the Human Past at Harvard (SoHP); Department of the Classics; Department of History.

“The Fall of the Roman Empire: How should we study it in the 21st century?”

Michael McCormick

Francis Goelet Professor of Medieval History
Chair, Steering Committee, Initiative for the Science of the Human Past at Harvard (SoHP)

Chair:

David Reich

Department of Genetics, Harvard Medical School

With comments by:

Dimitar Angelov

Dumbarton Oaks Professor of Byzantine History, Harvard University

Kathleen Coleman

James Loeb Professor of the Classics, Harvard University

Joseph B. Lassiter

Senior Fellow, Senator John Heinz Professor of Management Practice in Environmental Management, Harvard Business School, Emeritus

Thursday, December 1, 2016, 5:15pm
CGIS South S020 (Belfer Case Study Room)
1730 Cambridge Street, Cambridge, MA

Part of a new lecture series from the Initiative for the Science of the Human Past at Harvard (SoHP). Discoveries in paleoclimate science, genomics, and digital humanities are transforming our knowledge of antiquity: find out about the latest advances with SoHP. Visit our website:

<http://sohp.fas.harvard.edu/>

